From the inauguration until now, and beyond, for the anticipated future, the proclamations of Mr Trump still appear to be improvised with recent activities linking DEI policy to air traffic accidents being an example. Activities such as this indicate that Mr Trump was not so much as voted in, but put in, and no, not Putin (no play on words intended) but someone trying to make it look like he orchestrated it.

TASS has reported excerpts from US television, with their own spin of course, but it seems rather obvious, so much so that it is like the Russians are being framed for 'helping' Mr Trump get into office.

Referring to the anti-Trump prayer of the inauguration by Right Rev. Mariann Budde, he has basically not understood the tenets of Christianity, otherwise his comments would not be so ignorant of basic Christian principles dating to the Didache (attributed to the apostles). It was a very strange incident indeed, which further cements the notion of the improvisation style being applied here. So it begs the question, "Does anyone know what exactly his objectives are?"

"Yes," is the answer. This is a piece of orchestrated chaos, an oxymoron in essence. There is no implication of calling anyone a 'moron,' for Mr Trump is no idiot. However, he is a business leader, an entrepreneur, and well practiced at this. In short, he is a businessman who happened to become President. Parenthetically, if Great Britain had Lord Alan Sugar as Prime Minister, this would be a comparison. Sir Kier Starmer is our Prime Minister who has successfully been passed muster by the Civil Service and Royalty, something Mr Trump covets.

Our suggestion is that Mr Trump 'hire' a former President that he trusts, to do the presidential work, whilst he engages in his very interesting business at an apparent political level.

Regarding the environment and withdrawal from the Paris Agreement, we suggest they 'rejoin' for it is feared that the extreme weather and environmental events are a harbinger of what will come. "The one who plants trees, knowing that he will never sit in their shade, has at least started to understand the meaning of life," said Rabindranath Tagore. If one is saved by God, should they not understand this and concepts such as mercy?

It is believed that external agencies are looking into orchestrated political interference, leading Mr Trump to believe he is President. To reiterate, we believe he should seek the counsel of a trusted, former President to assist him in the presidential office, so he can effectively lead the American nation to a better future, an improved humanity and prevent further weather/environmental catastrophes.
