If the choice is between healing the earth and abusing it, what would you do?

Fossil fuels will diminish and be gone totally, so if we're using them now and it's damaging our environment, what should we do?

The nuclear option is just a stop gap, it was always meant to be. France and China are leading the way in innovation, in regard to energy, so we should lean towards and explore with them. At such a time as now, this should be explored, due to the trade war.

The onus is to move from fossil to renewable energy, whether it be nuclear or otherwise.

Therefore, if the USA are determined to carry on ignoring the warning signs from the earth and environment, they will create their own destruction. However, the option is there to move forward and build bridges with France and China in a twofold manner, to end the trade war and breach innovative changes and developments in energy.
